

Children in Entertainment & Employment

Safeguard and support children in entertainment and employment Effectively safeguarding children in the entertainment industry and employment can be a complex process.

Capita One allows you to record information on performances, tuition and earnings which can be linked to other data available in One, such as attendance and attainment, to monitor the impact and effect on children.

Providing a central source of information for your teams, it can record employer information, location details, type of work or performance, a record of the responsible person, as well as a full history of children employed by the company.

One Children in Employment fully meets the requirements of the Children and Young Persons Act 1963, designed to protect the welfare of children and young people in work.

"Offering an online school admissions system is very beneficial for the public and gives the authority a lot of kudos. It demonstrates that we are keeping up with cultural changes and delivering a better service to the public."

Mark Godwin, One Systems Manager
at Devon County Council

Key Benefits

- Share information: reduce the need to re-enter data and minimise the risk of errors by drawing on existing information about the child directly from One.
- Safeguard: ensure that information on chaperones, including references, disclosure checks and notes on interviews, are recorded centrally.
- Target intervention: identify problems earlier by monitoring attendance and attainment records. Inspection visit information, including reasons for the inspection, when it was carried out and the outcome can be recorded centrally.
- Improve outcomes: supports the main legislative requirements regarding the protection of children and young people at work and involved in performances, maintaining the right balance for a child by having all the information in one record.
